the bylaws of the bank required the periodic treatment of directors, only a few days back. The directors of the bank were elected in 1893, and were chosen president of the bank, and held the office until 1894, his experience and counsel being of great value to the bank. He was re-elected in 1895. He, however, continued his office as president of the bank until the close of his life. When he joined the bank in 1872, the capital was $100,000, the assets were $750,000, the reserve $110,000, the deposits were $2,750,000, and the total liabilities were $2,750,000. The average interest paid on the deposits during the interval may be judged from the fact that the public deposits were $1,300,000, and the total liabilities $2,750,000. His business was conducted in a most successful manner. Mr. Shepherd Smith, then general manager, trip to England, Mr. Buckland undertook a general tour of the world, and was recognized by the award by the shareholders a special vote of 10,000. It may be mentioned that the bank was organized to provide the money to the establishment of a supplementary fund, to give relief to officers in case of illness, and to provide for the education of the president of the institution; and he after

At the meetings he attended, his direct-gate of one of the leading financial institutions of the country, he was the guest of honor. Although suffering from deafness for years, he to the last took very great interest in the public affairs of the country, when he rose to speak he threw light on the most important questions of the day, and his naturally forcible language.

Mr. Buckland, who lived to the age of 82, lost sight of his eyes at the age of 72. He was a member of the Society of Friends (Faithful and Mrs. C. K. Mackellar).

UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

MEETING OF CONVOCATION

A meeting of the members of Convocation at the University was held at the rooms of the Law School, on the 10th inst. The Rev. Mr. Laing, LL.D., presiding. The meeting was convened for the purpose of considering the result of a resolution signed by 46 members of the Senate, and passed by a majority of 25, on the 10th inst. The resolution was as follows:—That the Fellows of the Senate, and (2) the mode of voting the election of such Fellows. The members serving in the Senate at the time of the vote on the resolution were not, however, in a position to vote on the resolution, and frequently being expressed in favor of certain changes in the existing law regulating the election of such Fellows. It was, therefore, suggested that the resolution be introduced in the Council. It was deemed of the utmost importance that the resolution be passed, and it was, therefore, so ascertained.

Mr. Andrew L. Robertson of the Public Law Office, who had introduced the resolution as follows:—That the Fellows of the Senate heretofore elected shall continue to hold office until the expiration of their term of office. He did not feel as confident, perhaps, as he had felt at the time of the introduction of the resolution. Nevertheless, he saw no reason why the change should not be made, and he felt that the Council should do so. He felt that the Council should do so, and he felt that the Council should do so.

Jones, pastor of the Episcopal Church of Christchurch, N.Z., and Miss Alice Craig, second daughter of Mr. Henry Craig, of the same place, who acted as bridesmaid. The bride was attended in duchesse satin, plain skirt, with a full train, and a large veil, and was richly clothed with chiffon, and she wore the usual flowers. She carried a lovely shower bouquet of white and pink roses, and a large bunch of baby's and matied shower bouquets. The bridegroom wore a white tuxedo suit, and a white hat. Mr. J. Cunningham, of Christchurch, acted as best man. Mrs. E. J. Cunningham, of the same place, acted as the bridal party attendant. The church, and upon their leaving the vestry party entered the hall, where they were met by a number of about 40, were entertained by Mr. Craig, the bride's mother, at Carle's, (Hebburn), where they were seated. The wedding presents were duly honored. The wedding presents were numerous and costly. The happy couple left for their home at 12 o'clock.

the Act of 1887, section 48, to insist on payment of interest at the rate of 10 per cent on the overdue amounts of principal and interest. It is mandatory, and consequently the Government officials have no power to deal otherwise. I am sure that the Government officials are wrong that the Government is compelled to pay the interest at the rate of 10 per cent. I would attempt to state: This has been forcibly brought under my notice in a letter from a lady who is the widow of a soldier for a widow. The estate was unable to pay the interest on the principal of $100,000 at 10 per cent. on installment and interest over. Other cases have come to my knowledge, and I am sure that the Government is not the only factor for a remedy to be applied. I am, etc.

tion for his own business or handicraft by which he lives. And this is one reason why the estimates of the defence departments in all the colonies should be considered not only with care but with sympathy. Furthermore, it may be pointed out that the first duty of a Government at the present time is to make Australia impregnable. We see no necessity to take an alarmist view of the situation. It does not follow from all the incidents that have occurred in Turkey that war is imminent. Small credit may be given to the report that the Government has found a plan for the invasion of Northern Australia as soon as a favourable opportunity presents itself. There is no cause for fear. At the same time, seeing that the whole civilised world is living under organised military and naval systems, it behoves Australia to keep its forces at such a number and in such precision of drill that an attack will be almost impossible. And if this be the case, the Government of the New South Wales could, it is fairly to say, the lead in Much jealousy has recently been shown because of the annexations which have been made by Great Britain throughout the world, and one Empire has threatened us in South Africa and another in Egypt. These are comparatively trifling matters, however, and the most dangerous conquest, perhaps, that Great Britain has made has been in Europe. The people who believe with WELLINGTON that the the victories of the British race were won on the playgrounds of the Public Schools and were everywhere acknowledged as the cause of the wholesome and healthy custom of encouraging outdoor sports is being initiated in the principal nations of Europe. It is well known, of course, that one or two important races in France, that is to say, there are skating races in Holland, and that the bicycle is everywhere. And the older generation on the Continent doubtless wonders at the change that has been brought about by the rapid progress of the bicycle.

the years that bring the philosophic mind they probably regard the change in the most optimistic way. But this alteration has been due to the sports which England has fostered, and our country is certainly not behindhand. While the English may be taking lessons from the Continental armies the people in Europe are taking to the game, and in sports which our ways of educating Englishmen in every part of the world.

The best instance of this movement is the fact that the two illustrated pages of the Yacaré and the two illustrated sporting columns and that in both countries the headline is virtually the word "Sport". In a French paper we find that the plural is used, and that the word appears as "sports" when the plural is required; the singular of the noun is employed. But in both countries the general term for athletic exercises has apparently been borrowed from England, and this helps to explain the fact that there are no words at all stressed with an English look.

ing down the columns it turns out that the word "yacht" is used in both languages. As a matter of fact, one French newspaper has even published an article on the subject with what is most obviously an English word, "Yachting." Then it appears in a German journal that particular interest was raised in the "starters" of the two-year-old boat race to a certain stable. The phrase and the fact both show that a great change must have happened since the time when Prince Bismarck

The French seem to use the words "exclaiming," "hieroglyph," and "bicyclette." But it is not necessary to start further with words, or to try to point out that the French newspapers are now filled with races for championships. GSH has been established apparently at Hamburg, and the people are not inclined to think that the language has gained another valuable noun. It may be sufficient, however, to say that there are now "clubs" over the whole of Europe, that that there are interludes in Paris. This alone gives some indication of the hold which the sports that are familiar to all Australians are acquiring in the countries of Europe.

It is interesting to notice that, while the English borrow words from the French to express the nice distinctions in conversation and in writing, the latter borrow from the English the terms which we apply to athletic games. The progress of their language is to some extent the reverse of our own.

Taken generally, the list just disposed of presented very few cases of public interest, and there was not one article which was particularly noteworthy, save, serminaly, the satires in other cases. The fourth Term of the year will commence about the first of October.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE'S REVENUE.—The jury sitting before the Supreme Court Judge, with the exception of Mr. Justice Stephen, who takes the Criminal Sessions, will shortly leave the country on their tour of inspection. The Chief Justice will take, Mulgrave, Dubbo, and extent the measure of the friendship that we may have to face at the friendly sports events is rather different from that in the English-speaking communities. There was some proposal that the Australian cricket team should appear in France. So far as the present tour is concerned, the subject has been mentioned, but the day may come when a match will be possible in France. And, therefore, it may fairly be asked, leaving outside for the moment a set of political questions, what is the best way of trying to bring the

...nations more closely together—whether in creating new interests for the people it is not really fulfilling an important function and tending to the maintenance of peace. Another point of view some people may say that such sports as those to which we have referred are apt to carry with them the evil of mercenaryism. This is true enough, and will be admitted by those who are the best friends of athletic exercise and outdoor competitions. But it was remarked by SPINOZA that noble things are rare, and many are extremely rare. Any country that has a reputation for something of the ignoble in commonplaces, affairs, they are yet well worthy of attention. Discounting this part of the business, however, there are two or three things which ought to be considered, and which flattering to the national vanity of England to find that its customs are being copied to such an extent that it is required to supply words to the rest of the nation. It may be supposed that contests in games that require both skill and physical process may lessen the chances of the outcome of that more dangerous business which is known as war. The more we are able to reason to believe that it is the extension of the English sporting system on the Continent is likely in the long run to lead to other than a good fruition.
